ELECTRICAL WORKERS UNITE. Five Local Unions Form a District

Conneil. The electrical workers of St. Louis have The electrical workers of Si. Louis have formed a district council among the members of the craft similar to that of the carpenters. It is composed of five local unions, including inside and outside wiremen, trimmers, cable spileers and helpers. The movement, in labor circles, is regarded as a great advantage to the electrical workers, as it brings the different branches of the craft under one general head.

The new headquarters of the council were opened yesterday at Lightstone's Hall, corner of Eleventh street and Franklin avenue. An instruction hall, furnished with blackboards and charts, has been made a part of the headquarters, where instructions in in-tricate problems of wiring will be demon-strated to the apprentices by expert elec-tricians.

Among those who were active in the for-mation of the new council were Patrick Courhiin, business agent of Local No. 1; J. J. Manson, business agent of Local No. 2, and F. E. Lockman, second vice president of the National Electrical Workers' Union.
